

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

THE Library here offered for sale, the Catalogue of which extends from pp. 1 to 78, belonged to the late Professor W. W. TURNER, formerly of New York, and recently Librarian of the Patent Office at Washington. A collection so special in its character, and containing so large a proportion of rare and valuable books, will naturally excite a wish to learn something of the owner. Though his name was familiar to all engaged in philological pursuits, to the world in general it was unknown; and hence it has been thought that a brief notice of his life and labors would not be out of place on this occasion.

WILLIAM WADDEN TURNER was born in England in the year 1810, and came to the United States with his parents in 1818. Of worldly advantages he had little to boast; but without peculiar encouragement, the desire for knowledge, which was an innate element of his nature, was early observed to manifest itself. Yet he was not that unhealthy phenomenon, a precocious child. He had a full share of the boyish love for fun and play, the wholesome relics of which often showed themselves in his maturer years. After receiving a moderate amount of school instruction, he was, at the proper age, apprenticed to the printing-business. And now his education really commenced. At spare moments during the hours of work, a book was ever his companion; at meals, a book was in his hand; at night, when he should have been at rest, he was still poring over a book.

Among his companions he sought out those who spoke foreign languages; and his untiring industry was at length rewarded by the mastery of French, Latin, and German. His apprenticeship over, he continued to work at his business, prosecuting his studies at the same time with undiminished ardor. Under the instruction of the late Professor Nordheimer, he soon made sufficient progress in Hebrew and other Oriental languages to qualify him to assist that gentleman in the preparation of a new Hebrew Grammar; and by their joint labors the work was published at New York in 1838; Prof. Nordheimer, in the preface, making a handsome acknowledgment of the valuable assistance rendered by his pupil and friend.

In no long time Mr. Turner was enabled to devote himself exclusively to literary pursuits. On the decease of Prof. Nordheimer he became Instructor in Hebrew and the Oriental Languages in the Union Theological Seminary at New York, which situation he resigned in 1852, on being appointed Librarian of the Patent Office. He died at Washington, D. C., Nov. 29, 1859.

The following extract from the Historical Magazine for January will fill out this scanty outline of Mr. Turner's life.

"From the time of the publication of the Hebrew Grammar, Mr. Turner's aid and advice were constantly in demand in the preparation of works on philology and linguistics. A brief enumeration of his literary labors is all we can find room for here. With Dr. Nordheimer he prepared a Hebrew Chrestomathy. Of his translations we may record the first volume of Mackeldey's Compendium of Modern Civil Law, in conjunction with Dr. Kauffmann; Von Raumer's United States, published by the Langleys; and the article on Fine Arts in the Iconographic Encyclopædia. The Latin-English Lexicon compiled by Andrews from the larger work of Freund is mainly indebted for its accuracy and completeness to Mr. Turner's varied learning and industry. The Dakota Grammar and Dictionary, and also the Yoruba Grammar and Dictionary, both published by the Smithsonian Institution, are all, save the collection of materials, substantially his works. The Transactions of the Oriental and Ethnological Societies are indebted to him for many valuable papers; and these contributions have perhaps done more than anything else to establish his reputation. He also contributed to the Bibliotheca Sacra. Other works, besides those enumerated, have more or less benefited by his advice and assistance.

"This short sketch of Mr. Turner's life gives a very inadequate idea of his acquirements. Gifted with a peculiar genius for the acquisition of languages, his energies carried him far beyond the ordinary limits of classical learning. He plunged into the study of Oriental languages with extraordinary diligence and enthusiasm. Without cataloguing his acquisitions in this department of knowledge, we will simply say that we use the word Oriental in the most comprehensive sense, embracing both ancient and modern dialects. His paper on the Interpretation of the 68th Psalm in the Bibliotheca Sacra for May, 1848; his Account of a Japanese Romance; and his paper on a Phœnician Inscription at Sidon, in the Transactions of the Oriental Society, faintly indicate the wide range of his attainments. Mr. Turner also made the languages of the North American Indians a special object of study. It is much to be regretted that the anticipation expressed by Dr. Nordheimer (viz. that he would issue to the world an independent publication of his own) has never been fully realized. One reason for this, indeed, may be found in an amiable feature of his character. Ever ready to promote the cause of learning, his advice and coöperation were always at the service not only of friends but even of comparative strangers. His were the silent labors of the chamber counsel, while others held the ear of the court. But although he has not given to the world any independent publication, he has done enough to establish himself as an Oriental Scholar and Comparative Philologist of the first mark, and his reputation in this department is European as well as American."

The bent of Mr. Turner's mind is decisively indicated by the preponderance of philological works in his library. Few books, of his own choice, found a place there which did not possess intrinsic merit. His first care was to procure original editions. He "would not have the mutilated thing in his house," was his remark in reference to an imperfect reprint. He was no mere book fancier. With care and judgment, as the course of his studies called for them, were these volumes collected during a space of thirty years; and in many branches it will be noted that he has kept himself well up with the latest investigations and discoveries. He was the architect of his own education; and these books, now to be scattered abroad, were the tools with which he did the work.

Nulla dies sine linea. These words, pencilled by himself on a blank leaf of a MS. Catalogue of his library, may well be his motto. His mind was ever busy; his hand never idle. Many of the books present evidences of his ceaseless industry; not only in the marginal notes with which they abound, but in cuttings from newspapers relative to the subject-matter. He was ever on the alert to detect philological affinities; and it is interesting to observe how frequently these miscellaneous scraps, of the most diverse character, have a more or less direct connexion with his favorite pursuit. But aside from linguistics, Mr. Turner's acquirements were great and various. Knowledge in any shape had charms for him. Few men have sought it more assiduously; few have had more rich and varied a reward.

With a few words on Mr. Turner's personal character, penned in the broken utterances of grief by one who knew him well, this record must come to a close:

"So quiet the current of his life, and so constant his application to his books, few incidents can be detailed. His constant and laborious studies for the sake of truth, for the love of study, and for the good that he might do. Fame was little thought of. Sympathy and interest in all classes of men, and especially for the poor and oppressed: unselfishness, and true thankfulness for all the good gifts of God, and contentment."
